musicking the meanings of pdf

In Warwickshire, the custom was known as "loo-belling" or "lewbellling", and in northern England as "riding the stang". Other names given to this or similar customs were "rough-musicking" and "hussitting" (said to be a reference to the Hussites or followers of John Huss).. Noisy, masked processions were held outside the home of the supposed wrongdoer, involving the cacophonous rattling of bones ...
